HIS VIEW IS ADOPTED

ALBANY, Aug. 20 -- More instead of fewer impeachments were declared by Elihu Root in the Constitutional Convention to-night to be the best method for checking the demand for the recall of public officials,

Leroy A. Lincoln of Buffalo aroused Mr. Root when he moved to strike from the judiciary article the provision that the court of impeachment, comprising the State Senators and the Judges of the Court of Appeals in an impeachment trial, "may order all or any part of the testimony to be taken and reported by a committee composed of members of the court except that the impeached officer must be allowed to testify before the court if he so desires."

Mr. Lincoln thought that an impeach-ment trial was important enough to compel the full court to hear all the testi-

ny. 'I think Mr. Lincoln takes too rigid a view," said Mr. Root. "An impeachment is not a criminal proceeding and in an impeachment judgment does not extend beyond removal from office, to which disqualification from the future holding of office may be added, but the party impeached may still be indictable and punished according to law.

"The precise and rigid rules for the protection of defendants in criminal cases are the result of tenderness of the law for liberty and life, which are not called in question at all in impeach-ment cases. An impeachment is purely a matter between the people and their political agent, and the great obstacle to the successful use of impeachment as a means of enabling the people to deal with their unfaithful servants arises from the fact that an impeachment stops the wheels of government.

"Mr. Lincoln says there have beer only four impeachments in this State. There should have been more. We would have had a better government and a more contented people if the impeach-ment remedy had been more practical and available, so that more unfaithful officers could have been called to "The inadequacy of the impeachment remedy has been such that over a large part of our country people have been demanding not that public officials should have their office secured by the right of trial before a court with the right to be confronted with the witnesses, but that they should be liable to be recalled by a popular vote cast upon the informa-tion obtained from the columns of the

"It is the inadequacy of the remedy of impeachment which has led to the widespread demand for recall, and those who believe that that would be a great misfortune are bound to make the legal remedy of impeachment so adequate that we will hear no more of this demand for the recall. This impeachment section of the judiciary article should be adopted as it stands."

The convention then adopted the section unanimously as desired by Mr. Root, and as it was reported from the Judiciary Committee.

Article Largely Adopted.

The convention will conclude the consideration of the judiciary article before the adjournment of the morning session sections of the article preceding the section dealing with the Court of General Sessions and the other courts of

MAKE IMPEACHMENT MODIFIED TANNER PLAN OFFERED BY OLD GUARD

Compromise Article Calls for Two More Elective State Officials and Sixteen Appointive Department Heads.

ALBANT, Aug. 20.—A compromise proposal designed to act as a substitute for the Tanner plan to centralize the appointing power in the Governor and the short bailot project has been the short bailot project has b drafted by the State organization Republicans and was laid before the Tanpublicans and was laid before the Tan-ner committee to-night. Acceptance of the plan will ward off the most bitter political fight that has loomed up in the Constitutional Convention between State and executive functions of the the Constitutional Convention between State government now exercised by the "Federal crowd."

The compromise plan provides for the election of the heads of the following

A Department of State, the head of which shall be the Secretary of State. A Department of Finance, the head of which shall be the Comptroller, who shall be the chief fiscal officer of the

A Department of Law, the head of which shall be the Attorney-General, who shall be the attorney for all administrative and executive depart-ments, boards and commissions of the A Department of Public Works, the head of which shall be the Superintendent of Public Works.

A Department of Agriculture, the head of which shall be the Commissloner of Agriculture.

Appointive Departments.

In addition the plan provides for the following departments, the heads of which shall be appointed by the Governor with the approval of the State Senate, but they may be removed without the Senate's approval

A Department of the Treasury, the head of which shall be the Treasurer. A Department of Accounting, the head of which shall be the Commissioner of Accounts. A Department of Civil Service, the head of which shall be the Civil Service Commission, to consist of three members. A Department of Taxation, the head of which shall be the Tax Commis-sion, to consist of three members.

A Department of Health, the head which shall be the Commissioner of Heal; h. A Department of Charities and Correction, the head of which shall be the State Board of Charities, to consist of twelve members.

A Department of State Hospitals for the Insane, the head of which shall be the State Commission of Lunacy, to consist of three members. A Department of Prisons, the head which shall be the Superintendent

A Department of Banking, the head which shall be the Superintendent

Any Commissioner department under the new plan.

The plan further provides:
"At the next session of the Legislature it shall provide by law for the appropriand officers, except the Governor and Lieutenant-Governor. The functions of one department board or commission shall not overlap those of another.

"Pending such assignment existing officers, departments, boards and com missions are continued with existing powers and duties subject to the the Legislature to enlarge, diminish the same.

or modify the same.
"Subject to the power of the Legislature to reduce the number of officers and employees, whenever the functions of any office, department, board or commiscommission as herein provided, the officers or employees exercising the same shall be transferred to the service of such department, board or commission.

May Assign New Powers.

"The Legislature may from time to me provide by law for the assignment of new functions and powers to the de-partments, boards and commissions hereby continued or created and may increase, diminish or modify the func-tions and powers of any such departboard or commission, but no new department shall be created. An bureau, board or commission hereafter created shall be placed within and sub-ordinated to a department, board or commission mentioned in this article."

Both plans provide for the election of the Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Attorney-General and Comptroller, but in addition to these the compromise plan provides for the election of Secre-tary of State, the State Superintendent of Public Works and State Commis sioner of Agriculture, the latter two being new elective officers. Both the Tanner plan and the compromise plan provide for the appoint-ment by the Governor of the head of the department which is to take the place of the State Treasurer. The Tanner plan provides for the appointment of the head of the Agricultural and Pub-Works Department in view of the t that the Public Works Superinendent will preside over a department nto which will be consolidated the State Highway Department, the State En eer's office and the State Architect's office, really taking the place of the State Engineer, who is now an elective

The Comptroller's Power.

Although the Comptroller is to be elected under both plans, under the Tanner plan the State Treasurer is given practically all the powers of the Comp-troller, while these powers are retained by the Comptroller under the compromise plan, which, place of a depart-ment of taxation and finance, which is provided for in the Tanner plan, es-tablishes two departments, one a depart-ment of accounting and the other a de-

Education of Youth to Become Good Citizens

Attributes to Be Cultivated Include the Personal Virtues Such as Honesty, Uprightness and Purity, and Respect for Authority-Boarding School Life Great Asset.

By RALPH K. BEARCE.

Headmaster Powder Point School, Duxbury, Mass.

F we are to consider the problem more he is being trusted by the masgood citizens we must first of all come to some understanding as to the qualities—or elements—that make up good citizenship. We hear much these days about our rights as American citi-be in any way double in his dealings. He has acquired the habit of right liv-ing, and he has acquired more and more independence in that habit until the habit for rightness is stronger than any our Government must protect-even to the point of war if necessary. It is not sonar virtue that men try to declare their the school is a good one, it is very business rights and condemn the Government of the school and be graduated through the school and be graduated to the school and out a system of laws by which the his own feet as a man with a stro many shall be protected when in those efforts individual convenience and individual profits are even temporarily effected. When we think soberly, howreducted. When we think soberly, however, we all know that citizenship not only confers favors and rights upon members favors and rights upon the makes demands as well. If we are to try to bring up our boys to become "good citizens" we must understand what are the elements of good citizenship, because those elements must be developed, sometimes, one at a time. At least the boys themselves must get the idea in its concrete form so that the contract of the co are to try to bring up our boys to be-come "good citizens" we must under-stand what are the elements of good sonal virtues such as honesty, uprightness and personal purity. Without these sonal virtues such as honesty, uprightness and personal purity. Without these virtues a man cannot maintain his position in his own little community. His hold before will not trust him and his business and family life will be seriticusly affected. But a man may be honest and at the same time be selfish

He may be morally clean and be a snob. He may be upright and be unbending. It will never do for a man to be simply good and ignore his relations to his neighbors if he wants to be a good citizen. He must then not only have high ideals for his own personal character—he must understand communtinty life in all its phases and must have to that life. Citizensilp consists not only in keeping the laws so as to keep out of jail or even so far as to keep in the church; it consists of helping to make the laws and to elect men to administer to thousand and one movements to build up a better community and to make a to better world.

A good citizen must also have respect unwilling to have men in authority poraries and learn not only the power whom he cannot respect. One of the mise plan, which, place of a department of taxation and finance, which is provided for in the Tanner plan, establishes two departments, one a department of the treasury, the head of each to be appointed by the Governor.

The Tanner plan continues the State Board of Charities, the State Hospital Commission and the State Commission of Prisons, with their present powers under a Secretary of Charities and Correction.

The compromise plan continues the State Hospital Commission and the State Board of Charities, the State Hospital Commission and the State State Hospital Commission and the State Superin-State Board of Charities, the State Hospital Commission and the State Superins tendent of Prisons as separate departments, and makes no mention of the State Fiscal Supervisor or the State Frison Commission. The State Excise The term of office of each Commissioner Shall be five years. Any Commissioner Shall be five years and consent of the municipality to burdensome for the municipality to bear. These appraisal expenses now for business, in common justice to State Fiscal Supervisor or the State Excise department under the new plan.

State Board of Charities, the State Hospital Commission and the State Supervisor or the State as good citizen should assert the policy that each office must be filled by a man who is exercising his virtues as a good citizen should assert the policy that each office must be filled by a man who is exercising his virtues as a good citizen should assert the policy that each office must be filled by a man who is exercising his virtues as a good citizen should assert the policy that each office must be filled by a man who is exercising his virtues as a good citizen should assert the policy that each office must be filled by a man who is exercising his virtues as a good citizen should assert the policy that each office must be filled by a man who is exercising his virtues as a good citizen should assert the policy that each office must be filled by a man who is exercising his virtues as a good citizen should assert the policy that each office must be filled by a man who is exercising his virtues as a good citizen should assert the policy that each office must be filled by a man who is exercising his virtues as a good citizen should assert the policy that each office must be filled by a man who is exercising his virtues as a good citizen should assert the policy that each office must be filled by a man who is exercising his virtues as a good citizen should assert the policy that for business, in common justice he should be assured a moderate livelihood in his declining years."

The Patronage System.

Mr. Quigg discussed the patronage which the Appellate Divisions of the Supreme Court would have in the appointment of commissioners and said:

"If you prevent the Supreme Court commissioners from practising law you will have to give them at least a salary of $10,000. Any lawyer in New York who cannot earn $10,000 is not worth his salt."

"Do you know, Mr. Quigg, that the average earnings of a lawyer in New York city do not exceed $1,000 a year and that there are many of them, very able lawyers, who are obliged to eke out an existence upon an income no greater than that?" inquired Louis Marshall.

"I think men get their earnings according to what they are worth." re
"I think men get their earnings according to what they are worth." re
"I think men get their earnings according to what they are worth." re
"I depend the same working principle.

Here then is the problem: Given, a boy; to construct a citizen—a man who will nave an intermed the interest. There then is the problem: Given a cording principle.

Here then is the problem: Given a boy; to construct a citizen—a man who will nave an intermed the number of commissioners and and who will assert the fact as a working principle.

Here then is the problem: Given a boy; to construct a citizen—a man who will nave an active knowledge of and interest in all things that make up community life, and who will assert the fact that only through a greater efficiency can he will have to give them at least to greater efficiency and the must learn to degree efficiency without bitterness. He must learn to acquire efficiency without bitterness. He must learn to acquire efficiency without bitterness. There are always more candidates for a boy in the must learn to one of the fact that only through a promise court of will be an interest. There are all who will assert the fact as the fact that only through the termust accept it as a thcory. The same was a tioned, we are first to consider how to bring up a boy so that he will possess personal virtues such as honesty, uprightness and personal purity. Of course these virtues are taught to every well bred boy from his crudle up, but the development of these virtues as habits must be something more than a matter of instruction. If we wish to teach a pupil to play the piano, we do not content ourselves with simply giving the pupil lessons, in which he is told how to play. We require hours and hours of practice, first, under the supervision of some person who knows how the practice should be conducted, and then more and more upon his own responsibility until he can practise properly. In time he becomes able not only to practise as he ought, but to play the plano, without a teacher and without a supervision. Honesty, personal purity and all the other virtues are complex matters. Every man has many chances of almost us many different sorts to be dishonest or to be impure, and it is necessary for honesty and purity to be such a fixed of training young men to become ters, and that more and more younger to boys are looking to him for help, and other appeal, and what is true of hon esty is equally true of any other sonal virtue that might be named. without the ability to stand squarely on the idea in its concrete form so that transport in the idea in its concrete form so that transport in the interfered with. Outside of work hours there are at least as many lines of activity as enter into the life of an outside community. Some boys take up that a good citizen has the simple personal virtues such as housesty unright. as their special outside interest the school paper. In that work they try school paper. In that work the better world.

A good citizen must also have respect for authority—not simply the kind of respect that makes him obey those in authority, but the kind that makes him authority, but the kind that makes him authority, but the kind that makes him authority have men in authority. dangers of our present system is that and to express opinions, and, best of capable men do not respect those whom all, learn to have opinions on all sorts they themselves have helped to elect to of subjects. The Y. M. C. A. has a

Every man has many chances of almost or to be impure, and it is necessary for honesty and purity to be such a fixed habit that those opportunities will be no more of a temptation to him than a glass of liquor is a temptation to a man who has throughout all his youth and early maturity been a teetotaller. The boarding school recognizes these needs, and it offers splendid opportunities for the practice of virtue. Every boy in his relation to his masters and to his associates has many opportunities to be dishonest in varying degrees. Even if he has established himself in the school as an, honest boy there come up questions of his relations to his school masters and occasions when there is opportunity to play double with his mates, but he lives his life constantly under the eyes of people who are interested in his right development. Every master is ready to give a lift, and the boys in school who are older than himself and who have been through the course, and therefore who know the need for strength and the dangers of weakness, are ready to advise and help and encourage toward the right thing. The value of boarding school life to a boy in this matter of developing personal virtues lies partly in the fact that his associates are boys more or less like himself. There is enough difference in the boys to develop the idea of democracy, but enough similarity to make all the boys feel that they are working toward the same general end, and so while there are likely to be enough individuals to tempt one toward the work and the boys find that they then must the predominant to be be conting the working toward the same general end, and so while there are likely to be enough individuals to tempt one toward the working toward the same general end, and so while there are likely to be enough individuals to tempt one toward the working the predominant to the process of the authority of a master over his boys list the developing entires the event his boys had the process of developing entires the section of authority is not the for more careful and more thoughtful in the selection of their officers. The president of the athletic association, the managers of the teams, the team captains, the leader of the musical clubs, the president of the Y. M. C. A., are all persons of real importance in student life, and the students themselves learn to be careful in their selections. It is a frequent to the long run the leasured will be a useful lesson when these boys have acquired the real responsibilities of clitzenship.

Of course, these are not all of the ways in which boarding school life decommendated the greater community. This is a school streetly upon the boys because that the things that are true in the greater community. This is a school life are just as true in the greater community.
